GOESAERT V. CLEARY

GOESAERT V. CLEARY, 335 U.S. 464 (1948), was a United States Supreme Court case in which the Court considered a Michigan law which prohibited women from being licensed as a bartender in all cities having a population of 50,000 or more, unless their father or husband owned the establishment. Valentine Goesaert, the plaintiff in this case, challenged the law on the ground that it infringed on the Fourteenth Amendment's Equal Protection Clause.

THE WOMEN'S BAR ASSOCIATION FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA WAS founded on May 17, 1917, by Ellen Spencer Mussey and Emma Gillett. At that time, the Bar Association of the District of Columbia did not admit women. At the time of its founding, women still could not vote, could not serve on a jury, were largely denied entry into law schools and the practice of law; and were excluded from what was then the only bar association in the District of Columbia.

Faced with these restrictions, and against the backdrop of the women's suffrage movement, on May 17, 1917, 31 women lawyers, led by Ellen Spencer Mussey and Emma Gillett, established the Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia. The WBA celebrates its Centennial by honoring the legacy of these trailblazers in the continuing fight for equality and access. During 2016 and 2017, the WBA will mark its Centennial through special events, programming, and the pursuit of an historic preservation project.
